Eversheds Sutherland has further strengthened its employment offering in the Middle East with the arrival of Partner Lisa Bryson from its UK office in Northern Ireland to Dubai.

Bryson brings more than two decades of employment law experience, four of which as Partner, to the Dubai office having advised some of the global law firm's most significant clients on contentious and non-contentious employment issues, including high-value, high-profile and commercially-sensitive matters.

Her experience includes strategic advice for clients on diversity, equity and inclusion, internal investigations (including whistleblowing), the people considerations of ESG, restrictive covenants, discrimination, mental health and well-being in the workforce and global mobility issues.

Bryson's work in financial and professional services, TMT and industrials sectors makes her experience invaluable to some of the Middle East's most successful industries.

On her new assignment, Lisa Bryson, Partner at Eversheds Sutherland, says:

"It is an exciting time to be joining the Dubai office, especially as an employment lawyer. I am looking forward to lending my experience to the team and our clients and helping the region's businesses expand with people at the core of their growth."
